

Dear Employer,

I graduated from college as a Musician, this may sound too far away from the developer ecosystem, and it is. Becoming a developer was a "kind of" self-taught journey most of the time. I had the help of some really extensive free resources like The Odin Project: <https://www.theodinproject.com/> (where I took the Ruby on Rails path, React, Node.js, and Next.js) and Free Code Camp: <https://www.freecodecamp.org/perrosaurio725> (where I centered my attention to JavaScript, Typescript and Python).

Both of them gave me the content, but I had to earn all the knowledge with reading, practice, developing small toy projects up to big ones, and walking the path as some say. I did this with only my will to learn.

I am currently enrolled at the Universidad Nacional Experimental de las Telecomunicaciones e Informática (UNETI) on Venezuela. My goal is to pursue a comprehensive education and ultimately become a skilled Software Engineer.

My toolkit is composed of:

1. Ruby & Ruby on Rails
2. React
3. git.
4. Javascript.
5. Next.JS
6. NodeJs
7. Bootstrap/Tailwind (FlowBite too).
8. GitHub
9. Python (still learning).
10. PostgreSQL
11. Firebase
12. Mongo DB

This journey gave me the tools to understand how is usually the workflow of a developer, the way to tackle new unknown obstacles, and the resilience to keep up, because somewhere, on some web, someone has the answer even if I do not.

My experience as a musician gave me the tools to work with any kind of team under pressure or with enough time to deliver a plan for a project. This also taught me that you can achieve any goal or deadline with discipline, hard work, and a good understanding of the capabilities of the team members. Part of the philosophy of a jazz musician is that "music comes first" This extrapolates to any job I have done as my favorite guideline for teamwork.

I do not have any previous experience working as a developer for any company, I just have my projects and some freelance work done, but I am eager to learn and grow in this community. I like to tackle new challenges and I'm looking for opportunities to do it.'

Thank you for your time and consideration. I wish you well.

Sincerely

Miguel Figuera

miguelqui725@gmail.com

+58 424-172-7988